Summerfallow Methods

When performing summerfallow operations the farmer should keep in mind the four principal objectives which are as follows:

- 1 Conservation of the maximum amount of soil moisture.
- 2 Maintenance of a trash cover or a lumpy condition of the soil to prevent soil erosion.
- 3 Control of weeds.
- 4 Control of some insect pest.

Weed and insect control can largely be obtained if these same tillage operation if these are properly timed. For instance light fall cultivation of stubble is beneficial in destroying saw fly grubs and grasshopper eggs, as well as covering wild oat and other weed seeds, thus promoting early germination the following spring.

The quality of work done in summerfallow depends largely upon the timeliness of the operation and adjustment of the machine. A properly adjusted machine does a better job as well as a more economical one. The cutting edges of all tillage machines should be kept sharp at all times to ensure the complete cutting of all perennial roots.

The onco-way disc or tiller as it is commonly known has proven to be a very useful implement for summerfallow operation as it anchors the trash on the surface of the soil, thus protecting the soil against erosion. The tiller should not be used for more than one operation except where very heavy combine stubble exists. If there is only a light stubble and the tiller is used for more than one operation all the trash is completely buried and the soil is excessively pulverized.

It has been demonstrated that three and one half to four miles per hour is the most economical speed to pull tillage implements. If implements are drawn at a higher speed than this the draft per foot of width increases considerably. At higher speeds than these the soil is pulverized to a greater extent, and pulverized soil is the forerunner of erosion.

FIRE THREATENS NEWSPRINT

Thanks to her forest resource Canada produces as much newsprint as all other countries combined. Fire is the greatest enemy of this important industry. Prevention of forest fires checks needless destruction.

The Carbon Students' Union held a meeting Friday, Sept. 20. The officers for the year were elected as follows: President, Howard Hunt; vice-president, Neva White; secretary treasurer, Dale Poxon; convener of entertainment, Don McLeod; convener of sports, Ileen Schmidt and Bob Garrett.

The advisability of obtaining a volley ball and net was discussed at the meeting.

TOO CURIOUS

Two lady schoolteachers from Brooklyn, exploring Western Canada, stopped at a small, old fashioned hotel in Alberta. One of them, inclined to be worrisome, couldn't rest until she had toured the corridors in search of fire exits. The fire door she opened however, turned out to be that of the public bath, occupied at the moment by an elderly gentleman taking a shower. "Oh, excuse me!" the flustered lady stammered. "I'm looking for the fire escape" and ran for it. She hadn't gone far when she heard a shout behind her. To her dismay, the gentleman, wearing only a towel, was running after her. "Where's the fire?" he hollered.

A full heart helps others when it overflows.

Interest Shown In Bill of Rights

Interest in the Alberta Bill of Rights is growing by leaps and bounds as the date set for its hearing before the Supreme Court of Alberta approaches. It was stated by L. P. Daniels, Director of Publicity and Promotion with the Provincial Government. "We have received many thousands of requests for copies of the Bill," he said, "both from Alberta and from other sections of Canada. It has been a terrific job to answer them. Altogether over the past two months more than 120,000 copies have been mailed out."

Passed at the last session of the Alberta Legislature, the Bill of Rights proposes to set up a Board of Credit Commissioners responsible for the control of credit policy within Alberta. Its terms guarantee every Alberta citizen over 19 years of age an annual income of not less than $600 based on the 1945 price levels. Educational and medical benefits are also provided under the Act. It is proposed that the whole structure of financial policy in Alberta be founded upon the limitations of the natural resources of Alberta and the productive capacity of the people.

The Bill goes before the Alberta Supreme Court on September 30th, so as to determine its validity. Each term will be considered by itself, it is stated, and if any of them are ultra vires, they will be changed to conform to the Constitution.

Claims Ejection Was Too Rough

Damages amounting to $9,160 are being sought by William W. Tribawasser. Beiseker farmer from John Daubert, beverage room waiter employed by the Beiseker hotel and Sam Kruger, proprietor of the hotel in statement of claim filed in Supreme Court last week.

Mr. Tribawasser is asking $7,500 general damages and $1,660.65 special damages.

While in the beverage room of the Beiseker hotel July 30th Tribawasser charges he was "wrongly and by force ejected" by Daubert, employed as a waiter and bartender on the premises. Due to the treatment he received Tribawasser charges he received "serious injuries and sustained damages."

The plaintiff claims Daubert used more force than was necessary and also assaulted him which resulted in his sustaining a fractured left hip and suffering severe pain and shock. He was confined to hospital in Calgary for five weeks and was away from work approximately eight months, according to the statement.

Tribawasser is asking $460.65 for hospital and medical attention costs and $1,200 for loss of wages under special damages.

Soil Conservation

SOIL CONSERVATION has been a subject of interest to farmers and agricultural scientists in this country for many years. Members of these groups have long been conscious of the importance of the problems related to soil erosion, but it is doubtful if the population as a whole has realized how serious is the need for prompt and efficient action in this connection. Recent surveys have shown that the acreage of "bad lands", the name applied to areas in which the soil is no longer fertile, is increasing. In 1941 it was found that in the Prairie Provinces alone there were more than four million acres of abandoned farm lands. These lands would have a potential yield of 62,400,000 bushels of wheat each year, an item which would be far from negligible in increasing Canada's contribution to the world's food supply.

Is Common To All Provinces

The subject of soil erosion is dealt with in a recent article published by the Royal Bank of Canada. In this article the writer states that scientists have found that it takes nature about five hundred years to make one inch of good topsoil, "but this precious source of food and living is being washed from beneath our feet, or blown into the air, at terrific rates." The problem is one that is common to every province in Canada, but it has always been especially serious on the Prairies where wind, and the lack of trees in many districts, have kept it always before the people living there. Much has been accomplished under the terms of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act, passed in 1935. This act provides for the reclamation of areas affected by drought and soil drifting and through it, resources of the Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture and all other agencies concerned with this work have been combined in an effort to conserve and rehabilitate farm lands in the West.

Many Thousands Have Benefitted

It is estimated that more than fourteen million acres of land in the Prairie Provinces have benefitted from the work carried on under the P.F.R.A. Tree planting in connection with home building, the provision of shelter belts, individual or small water developments, community water projects, strip farming and scientific crop rotation are only a few of the measures which have been adopted by farmers in co-operation with workers under the P.F.R.A., with the object of conserving moisture and preventing soil erosion. Although many thousands of farmers have benefitted from these measures, it is clear that sustained and increasing interest in scientific methods of farming, particularly in respect to this question of soil conservation will be necessary if Western Canada is to remain a great grain-producing land. The writer of the article already referred to, concludes with the observation that: "Soil conservation opens up fresh opportunities like the discovery of a new West. Those who attempt it are transforming nature consciously, according to a plan, not merely taking what nature offers."

Means Big Loss

Income Of Prairie Farmers Greatly Reduced By Weeds

Weed control is of vast importance to agriculture. The lot of the prairie farmer is hampered by weeds which mean less income and more work. It is estimated that the annual income of the three prairie provinces is reduced by some $25,000,000 every year through decreased crop yields caused by weeds. To eradicate them by culture is a long and expensive process. Some feasible method of destroying weeds would save much of the loss to farmers. It needs to be a cheap and easy method of eradication, too. Then there is the drawback of the indifferent farmer who permits the growth of weeds upon his land. All the regulations and warnings seem not to affect the lazy agricultural sectionalist. Weed growers should be more sternly handled. Then nearby cities provide prolific breeding ground for sending weed seeds out over outlying territories. Wind-blown harvests of seeds from careless and indifferent towns and cities also are a loss to farmers adjacent thereto.—Brandon Sun.

FARM TRAGEDY

WINNIPEG—Irving Derkson, 10, died in hospital from injuries suffered a short time earlier when a cow dragged him about 250 yards along a suburban road. An eight-year-old brother told police that Irving, who was taking the cow to pasture, had tied one end of a rope to his own wrist and the other to the cow's horns.

Price Control And Rationing Information

Q.—May I get extra rations for meals served to harvest help?

A.—If your harvest help is planning on staying for more than two weeks, they will be expected to turn over their ration books to you. However, if they are not going to work at your farm for that length of time, you may apply to the local ration board in your district for their rations. You are entitled to extra rations if you serve twelve meals or more.

Q.—When will the three extra sugar-preserves coupons be declared valid?

A.—The ration coupons to cover the purchase of the three additional pounds of sugar for this year will be validated in September and December. On September 19 two of the three extra sugar-preserves coupons will become valid. The other one will be declared valid around December fifth.

Q.—If a ration book holder does not obtain his new book during the distribution dates, when will he be able to pick it up?

A.—Latecomers will not be able to obtain a new book until after September 29. The books will be issued from September 30 until October 15 by a few selected local ration boards. After October 15 only the branches of the ration administration will issue book No. 6. All applications received by the local ration boards after October 15, will be sent to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board offices for attention.

Please send your questions or your request for the pamphlet "Consumers' News" or the Blue Book in which you keep track of your ceiling prices, mentioning the name of this paper to the nearest Wartime Prices and Trade Board office in your province.

Warm Floors

Are A Very Important Factor In Home Heating

Warm floors have long been considered by heating engineers as one of the most important factors in keeping the home comfortably heated. Cold feet, they say, will quickly lead to general body discomfort and can be the cause of common colds. Warm floors are especially desirable in a home in which there are children because the floor is so often the place where they play.

To provide this essential home heating feature for homes located in the country as well as in town, a Canadian manufacturer has placed on the market this fall a new type of oil space heater that provides warm air circulation at floor level at all times that the heater is in operation. This Coleman Oil Heater is designed to move the heat—and to put the maximum amount of heat into the home by eliminating waste heat up the chimney. The "heat flow" design of the streamlined cabinet of this oil heater permits circulation of an extra large volume of warmed air. It is this circulation or movement of the warmed air plus fast-warm-up radiant heat that keeps floors warm and prevents cold corners in a room. This oil heater is said to provide a complete circulation of freshly warmed air three to five times an hour.

Used to be Bilious and Constipated

But Happy Days Here Again Since Relief was Found

Bilious attacks, headaches and constipation made life a burden to this mother of ten children. Then she started on a simple plan which she has never regretted. For ten years, the "little morning dose" of Kruschen has helped to keep her well, as she tells in this letter:—

"I have put my faith in Kruschen Salts for at least ten years. I used to suffer with nasty bilious spells, headaches and constipation. I wish I had taken Kruschen sooner. I am 46 years old and have had ten children. Thanks to my little morning dose of Kruschen I am free from constipation and I feel fine."—(Mrs.) C. H., Coventry.

It is reasonable to ask why this woman's headaches, constipation and biliousness were so happily relieved by Kruschen. The answer is that Kruschen is made up of six minerals or salts and when you take Kruschen regularly for a while, your stomach, liver, kidneys and your digestion are benefited. And that—as you know—is a big help in keeping regular and feeling fit. All druggists have Kruschen Salts: price 25c and 75c. Try them yourself and take just enough to suit you as a morning dose.

Britain's National Trust Jubilee Celebrations Dealt With Many Historic Places Of Great Interest

MANY overseas visitors, who were in Britain for the Newton tercentenary celebrations, doubtless made a pilgrimage to the small Lincolnshire manor house, Woolsthorpe Manor, where Britain's great scientist was born and formulated at least three of his great discoveries and where the orchard still contains a direct descendant of the famous tree from which he saw the apple fall. Like many other of England's historic buildings, Woolsthorpe is the property of the National Trust, to whom it was presented by the Royal Society and the Pilgrim Trust.

It so happens that while scientists celebrate the Newton tercentenary, the National Trust for Places of Historic Interest or Natural Beauty, to give it its full title, celebrates its own Jubilee, having been founded just over fifty years ago by three public spirited citizens, Miss Octavia Hill, the well-known housing reform pioneer, Sir Robert Hunter, solicitor to the Post Office and a zealous champion of access to open spaces, and Canon Rawnsley, vicar of the parish in the Lake District, Britain's great playground, much of which Trust has succeeded in preserving for all time.

At first a private company, the Trust was incorporated by Act of Parliament in 1907, which empowered it to hold land and buildings for the benefit of the nation. Although the Trust enjoys certain exemptions from tax, it has never received direct financial aid from the State and depends for current resources on members' subscriptions and individual benefactions. As membership at present is only some eight thousand, and the minimum subscription as low as ten shillings, the Trust's current resources are strictly limited, and it can only accept on behalf of the Nation, property unlikely to be a financial burden or for which an adequate endowment is provided. Many special appeals in the past have served to preserve properties ranging from Lakeland fells to complete villages. In many cases arrangements are made for owners of large country houses who can no longer afford their upkeep in modern conditions to make them over to the Trust while continuing in residence.

Despite difficulties, the Trust had before the recent war, acquired nearly fifty thousand acres all over England, Wales and Northern Ireland (a similar but separate Trust operates in Scotland). This figure has been more than doubled in the past seven years, and now stands at a hundred and fifteen thousand acres, while forty thousand acres more are preserved from industrial or housing "development" by restrictive covenants with the owners. The management of these properties costs money. Agriculture must be maintained and old buildings adapted to modern conditions. Woodlands, heath and fell cannot be expected to be self-supporting. Hence the National Trust has issued an appeal to all at home and overseas interested in preserving England's heritage, for new members and donations. In a few weeks donations have amounted to forty-one thousand pounds and there is an impressive list of new applications for membership. In recognition of the Trust's work for the nation, the Chancellor of the Exchequer has promised to recommend to Parliament the making of a pound-for-pound grant in connection with the appeal, to double its proceeds.

A survey of the Trust properties touches on all periods of England's historical and literary development, with numerous links with overseas. At Avebury, Wiltshire, it preserves one of the most important Stone Age sites in Europe. It owns considerable stretches of the famous Roman Wall across Northern England. At Bosham, Sussex, it owns the site from which, as the Bayeux Tapestry shows, King Harold set sail for Normandy. The Trust owns almost the whole of the historic meadows at Runnymede, where King John signed the Magna Carta. The Trust's medieval treasures include the George Inn at Southwark, the only surviving galleried inn in Central London, and a house in Kent, known as St. John's Jerusalem, once belonging to the Knights Hospitallars. At Swanton Morley, Norfolk, the Trust has land once belonging to an ancestor of Abraham Lincoln. The property was handed over two years ago in the presence of John Winant, the U.S.A. Ambassador. Quebec House, Westerham, enshrines memories of General Wolfe's early years. Last year the Trust acquired Juniper Hall, Box Hill, which has associations with Madame d'Arbly and distinguished French emigres from the revolution period. Four years ago, Lord Astor gave his famous house at Cliveden on the middle Thames "to be applied to promoting fellowship and goodwill among the English speaking nations." The House has many U.S.A. associations and the Canadian military hospital in the grounds has been presented to the Government as a memorial to the Canadians who fought in the war.

One of the most widely visited houses belonging to the National Trust is Clouds Hill, the Dorset cottage where Lawrence of Arabia lived after leaving the R.A.F. and which is kept exactly as during his lifetime. At Burwash, Sussex, the Trust owns three hundred acres including "Batemans" home of Rudyard Kipling, who has so graphically described its "discovery". The House was left to the Trust in 1940 by Mrs. Kipling. In the Lake District, nearly four thousand acres enshrine the memory of Beatrix Potter, creator of "Peter Rabbit", who became one of the district's leading sheep breeders. The above are only a few examples from a list which includes nine hundred properties, great and small.

Besides properties with definite historic or literary associations, the Trust owns considerable areas of the most beautiful of the English landscape, whose variety is world-renowned. These range from the highest mountain peak in England, Scafell Pike in the Lake District, to the only remaining stretch of original fen in East Anglia, and from bird sanctuaries among the sand dunes of the Norfolk Coast to the rugged grandeur of the Devon and Cornwall coasts. It is to ensure the preservation of as much as possible of England's rich historical heritage and varied natural scenery that the Trust issues its Jubilee appeal. While members enjoy many privileges, including access without charge to all Trust properties, their greatest privilege is the knowledge that they are sharing in the work of preserving many of the features that make Britain unique among the countries of the world.

Limpet Mine

Was Used To Sabotage A British Ship In Palestine Area

JERUSALEM.—The British army announced, after a two-day search of the Sedat Yam area, that it had found a limpet mine such as was used to sabotage the refugee ship Empire Rival.

Specially trained dogs found the mine, similar to one attached to the hull of the Empire Rival, as she was about to pull out for Cyprus with a group of Jewish refugees.

Four thousand troops carried out an intense search of the coastal area around Sedat Yam below Haifa. Their trained dogs found a mine without explosive, together with equipment like that worn by the "frogmen" who attached the mine to the ship.

The French Empire Now Appears To Be In A Process Of A Revolutionary Change

(By George Slocombe, New York Herald Tribune)

LESS dramatically, but none the less surely, the French empire, like the Dutch and the British, is in process of revolutionary change. The ferment of nationalism is contagious. The tides of Arab nationalism in the Middle East and of Chinese nationalism in the Far East, commingling with the changing currents of native Communism, German and Japanese intrigue, economic disabilities and individual ambition have swept through the French colonial possessions and protectorates sometimes destructively and violently, sometimes with an even more impressive regard for peace and order, but always inexorably.

The statesmen of the New France cannot escape the problem even if they would. The march of human thought and human passions is too irresistible to be denied. After the two other great and pressing problems of European peace and France's economic destiny comes the equally pressing problem of her imperial policy.

If France is to retain her empire and thus her world prestige, she must speedily, wisely and generously adjust her relationship with the six millions of black, brown and yellow-skinned people in various degrees of political, cultural and social advancement who compose what is now to be known as the French Union.

Two significant facts invite attention in any study of the French colonial problem. One is that the movements for autonomy or independence are strongest in those parts of the French Empire, notably Indo-China and North Africa, which were immediately under enemy occupation during the war or were subjected for a part of it to the influence and the mentality of Vichy. Whereas the rest of the empire which rallied spontaneously or after little delay to Gen. de Gaulle has remained either passive to or unaffected by the current movements of nationalism and separatism.

The second fact to be considered is that the territories most exposed to German and Japanese intrigue and now most engulfed under the tides of native nationalism are those most developed politically and economically. Example and emulation also play their part in fostering nationalist ambitions.

The nationalists of Indo-China take heart and energy from the success of the nationalists of India and China, Dutch Indonesia and Siam. The Arabs of North Africa look to the Arab states of the Middle East and Egypt. If there existed a powerful and independent Negro state in Central Africa the now apparently quiescent natives of French Equatorial Africa might nurture ambitions parallel to those of the other citizens of the French empire.

The very character of French civilization and of the French social attitude toward other races tends to encourage far-reaching political ambitions and administrative independence. There is little or no race prejudice in France. Long before there was a colonial problem, Negro Deputies from Martinique and Senegal sat in the French Parliament, took part in the secret discussions of the Parliamentary committees on military and foreign affairs, and even on occasions occupied the vice-presidency of the Chamber of Deputies.

One of the weaknesses of the French position in Indo-China is that similar rights were not accorded to the Indo-Chinese because in theory France exercised only a protectorate over Indo-China as over Tunisia. Yet neither the French policy of paternalism as practiced in Negro Africa nor that of absorption as practiced for nearly a century in Algeria, whose three departments are constitutionally assimilated by those of the French mainland in Europe, has been proved adequate to meet all situations in these rapidly changing times.

A patriarchy depends for its success in the ultimate resort on the wisdom and enlightened character of the administrator as well as upon the docility and discipline of the administered. And where is France to find a high-principled and educated administrative corps in an age when the teaching profession, the magistracy, and the higher civil service are steadily abandoned by the most brilliant of the younger generation because the rewards they offer are so pitifully insufficient?

The sad reality is that French civilization which at its best is possibly the highest and the most comprehensive system of thought and action offered to man since the Republic of Plato, is not acceptable any longer to many who have benefitted by it in the past except upon their own terms.

To Frenchmen who regard with pride the achievements of their predecessors in Africa and Asia, and who offer political and social equality on their own soil to all the various citizens of their empire, it is difficult and painful to comprehend that Annamites and Algerians today and Senegalese tomorrow may object to association in so ancient and proud an enterprise as the French Republic.

Even the most radical and enlightened of French colonialists and among these this writer counts the Socialist Marius Moutet who is now Minister for the Colonies or in the more subtle phraseology of the Fourth Republic "for France overseas" have not yet reconciled themselves to a step as radical as that of the British in India or even that now being contemplated by the Dutch in Indonesia.

Hence the best efforts of the Provisional Government of Georges Bidault to create a French Union which will be a free association of the more advanced colonial territories and an arbitrary protectorate over the less advanced are now meeting with suspicion and ill-will—suspicion among the natives, ill-will among the colonialists.

Thus the French empire which so lately emerged from the divisions and controversies of the war, faces other dangerous crises in the near future and he needs be bold and speculative who would predict in what form and at what time the French Union will determine its final destiny in the world.

Radar is being used to chart the courses of hurricanes and storms, providing time to warn large areas and save lives.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. STRANGE

Unrest Among Farmers

There is considerable unrest among our prairie farmers and well there might be. Most of them are not satisfied with the present price they are receiving for their wheat. Farmers are beginning to feel they are paying too many subsidies to too many other people. Here are the facts

Our farmers alone are subsidizing Britain at this moment to the tune of 50 cents a bushel on 160 million bushels a year. IS THIS FAIR?

The Canadian Government is withholding between 20 and 30 cents a bushel from our farmers, based on the price the government is actually receiving for the wheat they are selling, and withholding this 20 to 30 cents for five whole years. IS THIS RIGHT?

Our farmers are subsidizing all Canadians on 70 million bushels of wheat, used in Canada as flour and bread, for at least 30 cents a bushel. In addition our farmers are paying their share of the taxes required to allow millers to buy wheat for home consumption as flour and bread at 77 3-8 cents a bushel. IS THIS JUST?

I for one agree with our farmers that these price disparities, so discriminating against wheat growers, ARE NEITHER FAIR RIGHT NOR JUST. They should, therefore, be immediately corrected. The government can remove these discriminations overnight. WHY DON'T THEY?

OFF THE RECORD

There is some talk going on now that those taking over huge palatial homes by seizure and known as "squatters" should be allowed to stay in them and run them because may be, when they find out what is involved in costs and efforts to run them, they will rush to give them up themselves.

We talk about reconstruction in the world. The real job is recreation.

National Socialism?

The wheat agreement between Canada and Great Britain is likened to national socialism such as prevailed in Germany under Hitler, by the retiring president of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, George S. Mathieson. He said that to insure delivery the Canadian government is forced to compel the farmer to deliver his wheat to the government Wheat Board.

and it denies to the farmer the right to sell to anyone else. "which, after all, is the national socialism against which we have been fighting so hard for six years."

Mr. Mathieson expressed the opinion that the wheat agreement portended control and compulsory reduction of acreage as surpluses were to pile up; it generated suspicion among 60 other customer nations that this "dumping" of Canada's export-able surplus to one customer would affect the price they would be asked to pay; and it invited retaliation by other exporting nations.

Farmers Asked To File Forms

The National Barley Contest Committee have called attention of competitors to the need for getting in their application form for judging, if they are holding their competition barley for seed.

Forms have already been sent all contestants. As already pointed out they are in two parts. The top part is only to be used in applications for judging a carlot which the farmer ships.

The bottom part is to be used only by farmers who intend to hold their barley for seed. Under rules of the contest they have to be mailed to the National Barley Contest Committee, 206 Grain Exchange, Winnipeg, not later than November 15th.

The committee would like them earlier, if possible. The sooner they are in, the more convenient it will be for representatives of the plants products division to make the inspection and collect the samples. The judging of these entries has to be made from the bins.

There are three copies of the form, one white, one pink, the other blue. The white copy must be sent to the committee at Winnipeg. The pink copy must be given to the inspector when he comes to sample and inspect the bin and must be put in the 15-pound sack display of sample. The farmer keeps the blue copy.

Follow these instructions carefully, the committee asks bearing in mind what is said here applies only in cases where the contest barley is being sold for seed. And if possible, get the white copy of the form to the committee as soon as possible even though up to November 15 is allowed for mailing it.

The List That Shows Who and Where

If you are an EATON customer there is a stencil of your name and address at EATON'S Mail Order in Winnipeg. Your stencil, with hundreds of thousands of others, makes up the mailing list. Space is a problem, but the hard job is keeping this list up to date. It would be easy if people just remained the same; but they grow up, marry, die and about 7,000 of them move to new addresses every month. To keep track of all these changes requires the time of a large staff. YOU can help, too, by notifying us of any change of address. All this work is done so that EATON'S customers receive EATON'S Catalogue regularly.

Turkey Prices Up

The Prices Board has announced that maximum wholesale prices for grade A turkeys in all zones will be two and one-half cents per pound higher than those in effect during the 1945 packing period.

These new maximum prices will apply throughout the year and will be at a level one and one-quarter cents below the highest seasonal ceiling previously in effect.

Maximum wholesale prices in 1945 varied between 35 and 39 cents per pound.

Previously producers had marketed too heavily during the early fall season with a consequent scarcity at Christmas.

The schedule of maximum prices for roaster and fryer type chickens of all qualities is also revised, and the annual packing period reduction of three and five-eighths cents per pound will be lessened, and will be effective in stages over a period of three months.

The new order consolidates all previous poultry orders issued by the Board.

English Lavender

A Good Harvest Was Gathered This Year

Lavender—the basis of some of the United Kingdom's most famous perfumes—was gathered this year in the chief growing centre, Norfolk East England. The harvest was exceptionally good and the industry expects to produce a very good quantity of its high quality fragrant oil. The bulk of the season's perfume is scheduled for export to territories where "Old English Lavender" still holds an unrivalled reputation. Perfumery exports from the United Kingdom have shown an exceedingly rapid rise in the last year.

Gains Support

Campaign For Compulsory Pasteurization Has Backing Of Various Organizations

Among national organizations which have presented resolutions, through their provincial branches or directly from their national headquarters, to various provincial governments calling for enactment of legislation for compulsory pasteurization of milk were the Canadian Medical Association, the Canadian Nurses' Association, the Chief Constables' Association of Canada, and the Canadian Council for Crippled Children.

These resolutions, sent to all governments except Ontario, were in support of the Health League of Canada's campaign to obtain compulsory pasteurization laws throughout the Dominion. Ontario is the only province at present with such a law.

The resolutions pointed out that while milk is among the finest of all foods, it is, in its raw state, an excellent culture medium and a means for transmission of bacteria and communicable disease to humans. It was stated that pasteurization will destroy the infectious organisms without lessening milk's nutritive value.

Turkish Captain

Premier Marshal Tito Has Ordered His Release

LONDON.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Ankara said that Premier Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia had ordered the release of a Turkish captain who was wounded Aug. 9 when an American transport plane on which he was a passenger was forced down by Yugoslav fighters.

The officer had been detained by the Yugoslav government, although others aboard the plane were released, following a United States ultimatum.

There had been unofficial press reports that the officer, Capt. Ihsan Unesen, would be held by Yugoslav authorities for trial as a spy.

His release, the dispatch said, was the result of representations by the Turkish ambassador in Belgrade.

"I'M SORRY, Jones," boomed the large man behind the highly polished desk, "but the man I want as my Assistant Sales Manager must be an aggressive individual—a man of action with plenty of fight."

"I know, sir, but—" "Yes, I know what you mean," broke in the big man, "I realize that you have been with us for a good many years, and your work in the outer office has been excellent, but, well—as I say, I want a man with plenty of fight, and you just do not have that quality. I'm sorry."

"Yes sir," breathed Cuthbert Jones, who was a small-statured little man in his late fifties, with a good-natured face to match. The girl typing in the outer office was watching Cuthbert come out of the manager's office and take his place at the worn desk. She had worked with him for a long time, and had come to know him well—also his faults. She felt sorry for him now.

"I'm sorry, Cuthbert," she said, as she laid an understanding hand on his shoulder. "I wouldn't take it so hard if I were you."

"Thank you, Miss Simms," Cuthbert sighed. "You see, it wasn't the extra money that went with the job, but I so wanted to be able to go home and tell Belle that I finally amounted to something."

"Well, never you mind," the girl said. "Come and have coffee. Our rest period is in ten minutes."

"I believe I—oh my goodness," Cuthbert exclaimed, glancing at his watch, "it is almost three o'clock. I must hurry over to the bank with the day's receipts before they close. I'll have a cup when I return if you will keep it warm for me."

Not waiting for an answer, he squirmed into his overcoat and darted swiftly toward the door.

"Going down, Sam?" Cuthbert asked, as the doors of the elevator opened.

"Down it is," replied the operator.

"You look a little worried," observed Sam. "Something go wrong today?"

"Like I told you before, Sam," Cuthbert sighed again, "my wife has been nagging me as usual about asking the boss for that job, and this morning she threatened to pack up and leave me."

"By the expression you're wearing, it would appear that you did ask and were refused," the old man said knowingly.

"That's it, Sam," replied Cuthbert. "Our house is going to be awfully quiet from now on, I guess."

Cuthbert's brain was working overtime as he made his way through the traffic. What was he going to tell Belle? He wondered what train she would leave on, the early one or the late one. His stomach sickened at the thought of eating hamburgers and the like at the corner.

These morbid thoughts were interrupted by the town clock pealing off the hour of three. He broke into a run at the thought of being late. Thirty years of going to the bank for the same firm and never late once.

Lucky, the doors were still open. Cuthbert sped through the entrance with the speed of a greyhound, at the same time shouting, "hold it," at the top of his voice, fearing that the teller might close the window.

What the timid little man failed to see in his haste, was a burly individual, coat collar turned up, standing in front of the teller's cage. At the sound of Cuthbert's words, the man swung around. Seemingly from nowhere, two men of the bank seized their opportunity to grapple with the fellow.

All the while, Cuthbert stood staring, eyes and mouth wide open. Then with a groan, he sagged to the floor in a dead faint.

He awoke to find himself looking into admiring faces, including, of all people—his boss.

"Cuthbert," boomed the large man, as only he could boom, "you were wonderful. The bank manager phoned me and told me all about it. To think of you being the means of outwitting that robber."

"But really, sir—" Cuthbert started to explain.

"I know, I know," cut in the man, with the machine-gun voice, "you're just being modest—I knew all along that you had the stuff it takes. Tomorrow morning, Jones, you will take over the job of Assistant Sales Manager, but now I'm personally driving you home."

Cuthbert gave up trying to explain the situation to his boss, one just does not have nerve to contradict.

Reaching home, the little man was met at the door by his wife who hardly waited until his hat was off before demanding what he had done about what.

He assured her that he had and that he would start his new duties in the morning.

She threw both arms about the little man, almost shutting his wind off. "I told you that if you would only ask for the job you would get it."

"Yes, you're so right, dear," Cuthbert said.

The hard way, he thought.

Smoke from the Berkeley city dump, swept downward suddenly by atmospheric conditions, obscured the roadway. Four trucks and 12 automobiles had to be towed away. Nine others were able to creep off under power.

Miss Speltz: "Oh, that's not incurable!"

"I did that," was the answer. "I had a job washing elephants at the zoo."

"It must be hard to keep time on this ship."

"How is that?" "Well, I just heard the captain say he uses four watches a night!"

Old Gentleman—"You're an honest boy, but it was a $10 bill I dropped, not ten ones."

Youngster—"I know, mister, but the last time I found a $10 bill the man didn't have any change."

Mrs. Jones barged into the grocery store and briskly asked: Remember that cheese you sold me yesterday?"

Grocer: "Yes, madam." Mrs. Jones: "Did you say it was imported or deported from Switzerland?"

There is in our nature a far greater power than most of us ever use. We discover this by the extraordinary things we do when we are put to it . . . when we make up our minds.
